Trains Rolling Again

PM's Formula Ends $31 Million Nine-Day Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — CPR trains are running again today after arm-twisting by Prime Minister St. Laurent to end the nine-day stoppage. Train - continental passenger service was scheduled to resume early this evening.

The company and its firemen's union came to agreement late Friday — on temporary terms — to end the tieup that began Jan. 2 and cost the national economy an estimated $31,500,000.

Immediately, the CPR and union started rolling trains and men into operation.

Freight and passenger embargoes were lifted immediately. Spokesmen said priority would be given to transit of fuel and food supplies to centres dependent wholly on the CPR.

NORMAL BY MONDAY

The company said it expects normal operations to prevail by Monday, everywhere across the nation, weather permitting.

Mr. St. Laurent announced the settlement in the Commons at 5 p.m. Friday — nine days one hour from the time the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (CLC) pulled out its 3,000 members. Another 67,000 CPR employees were made idle by the shutdown and other thousands in industries dependent on CPR for transportation had to be laid off.

Besides the estimated $10,000,000 cost in lost production, CPR revenue losses are estimated at $14,000,000 and company employee salary losses at some $7,500,000 for an estimated overall total of $31,500,000.

The crux of the stoppage was the CPR's plan to pull firemen off freight and yard diesel engines.

The government now will set up a board of inquiry of three judges to recommend by Oct. 1 whether the number of firemen in diesel locomotive operations should be reduced.

The major issue in the negotiations on this point was whether the findings of the board should be binding. The CPR wanted them made binding, the union not.

The union won out on this issue, though the prime minister suggested in the Commons it would be difficult for either

Election Demand Issued by Labor

(From UP and Reuters Dispatches)

LONDON — The Opposition Labor Party prepared today to demand immediate elections on grounds the Conservatives involved Queen Elizabeth in party politics by leaving it up to her to choose a new prime minister.

It was a technical point that rocked Britain because the constitution prevents the monarch from taking part in politics.

The Queen was put in the position, Labor men intimated of choosing between Chancellor of the Exchequer Harold Macmillan and House Majority Leader R. A. Butler when Sir Anthony Eden resigned as prime minister earlier this week.

Normally, the party in power nominates a single choice for the premiership, relieving the monarch of personal political responsibility.

(It has not been publicly disclosed whether Sir Anthony recommended Mr. Macmillan or Mr. Butler, or left the choice open.)

Appointment Unconstitutional

The Laborites met behind closed doors Friday night to map strategy to force Macmillan into calling an immediate general election on grounds his appointment Thursday was unconstitutional, although the term of the present Conservative-ruled parliament does not expire until 1960.

They put off a decision whether to push the point until Labor Leader Hugh Gaitskell returns from a lecture tour in the United States.

Party leaders who leaked their plans to the press said Gaitskell agreed to cut the trip short next week and fly home.

They said Gaitskell reached this agreement in a Trans-Atlantic telephone conversation with James Griffiths, who is filling in for him during his absence.

The Socialist move was regarded here as a political sensation which threatened the Conservatives with a possible new crisis.

The dispute broke wide open before Macmillan had time to complete his Cabinet. He was expected to present the new government to the Queen for formal approval Sunday.

The Labor chiefs expressed fear that the Crown had been drawn into party politics "in a most undesirable way" when it was left to the sovereign to name either Macmillan or Butler.

Their views were expressed in a statement following a special meeting of the party's parliamentary committee — the leading Labor members in the House of Commons who sit as a "shadow cabinet."

The committee is examining further the constitutional implications of the way in which this change was brought about," the statement said.

Was Sovereign 'On the Spot'?

It hinted at a major political row over putting the sovereign "on the spot." Labor leaders now contend the only way to solve the difficulty is for Macmillan to ask the Queen to dissolve Parliament at once and call a new election.

An election, they said, would automatically relieve the Crown of the embarrassment caused to it.

Speakers included left-winger Aneurin Bevan who complained the Conservative Party had imposed on the Queen a delicate task she should not have been given.

The speakers argued that the Conservative Party's rank and file had not selected a leader to succeed Eden. The Queen had to do it for them.

It follows, the Socialists said, that if any Conservatives ob-

Year's Worst Snow Blasts Mainland

VANCOUVER (CP) — Parts of the Lower Mainland today were digging out of the heaviest snowstorm to hit the area this winter.

In the Mission district, 45 miles east of Vancouver in the Fraser Valley, a foot of snow fell, making driving difficult and chains a necessity for the hills.

A strong wind brought blizzard conditions in the valley and four-foot drifts were piled up off the highways.

Several cars and a large trailer truck skidded off the Trans-Canada Highway between Langley and Abbotsford. A snowplow was needed to clear the highway north of Abbotsford to allow a convoy of chartered buses to reach North Matsqui railway station where a large contingent of Hungarian refugees arrived by CNR train.

Buses were filled today with transport workers who left their cars home due to weather and road conditions. A number of cars were stranded for a time overnight in the wind-swept Sumas Prairie area.

Seven to eight inches of snow were reported on the Hope-Princeton highway and RCMP said conditions were bad in the Fraser Canyon section of the Trans-Canada Highway.

The storm in the upper Fraser Valley was described by residents as the worst snowstorm in recent years. Winds up to 50 miles an hour swirled the snow into drifts four and five feet deep.

Crews worked all night to keep the Trans-Canada and Lougheed highways open. They had little time to work on back roads in the Chilliwack, Rosedale, Agassiz, Mission and Abbotsford areas, and public works officials said those roads will be practically impassable until plowed.

U.S. Will Ask UN to Control Space Missiles

International Body Proposed For Job; Russ to Press Arms Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States is expected to outline a broad proposal for international control over space missiles Monday when the United Nations political committee takes up the arms question.

Informed sources indicated U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. will relay President Eisenhower's call for a "reliable agreement" on controlling military use of such projectiles.

Eisenhower set the stage for such a proposal in his state of the union message Thursday. In effect, the president called for an all-tight agreement within the framework of the UN on the use of inter-continental ballistic missiles.

3,773 Jobless In Victoria; More Jobs Due

Number of jobless in Victoria increased this week by 252, raising the total of unemployed to 3,773, the National Employment Service office here said today.

The increase was largely due to lay-offs from temporary Christmas jobs, NES said.

Figures show that mostly women were involved in the loss of employment. A total of 214 applied for insurance benefits, as compared with 38 men.

NES said the number of temporary job openings for men increased during the week.

NES said there were indications that a fair volume of work is ready to get under way as soon as the weather improves, but at the moment most jobs available are for replacements on regular crews.

MR. "G.O.P." RESIGNS—Mr. Leonard Hall wears a broad smile as he leaves the White House Friday after informing President Eisenhower that he is resigning as chairman of the Republican National Committee. side not to accept the final report of the board of inquiry.

CPR President N. R. Crump said in a statement that the prime minister had stated that "after the investigation, which now is being arranged, finality will be achieved."

"I have accepted this assessment," he added.

Union leaders welcomed the settlement.

"We are very glad and quite satisfied," said W. E. Gamble of Montreal, Canadian chief of the striking union.

However, Mr. St. Laurent made it clear that the temporary settlement of the diesel issue will be subject to renegotiation after the three judges report.

He said the CPR and the union have agreed to accept a temporary agreement on the wage issue in line with the report of a federal conciliation board.

The board's report calls for a general increase in wages of 12 per cent, compared with the 25 per cent boost originally sought by the union.

Informants said the government's idea on the wage issue is that the proposed new contract between the CPR and the union made the wage increase effective until May 31, 1958.

Mr. Gamble said he was "not too enthusiastic" about judges adjudicating the diesel issue—the union would have preferred a board including union and company appointees—but the plan to use judges was accepted to bring about a settlement.

He said he could not state that the union would abide by the board's finding.

"We will have to see what develops but it looks very encouraging," he added.

'EXPECTANT BRIDES' GET BETTER PROSPECT

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—No longer would altar-bound Rhode Island damsels be referred to as "expectant brides" in marriage licence forms if a bill filed in the State Legislature by representative L. Louise Stoddard becomes law.

Her bill would change the designation to "prospective" rather than "expectant."

The assemblywoman's move came after the Pawtucket Times published a whimsical appeal to the legislature to come to the aid of Rhode Island women's "good name."

object to Macmillan, they can do so only by finding fault with the Queen.

With painstaking effort to avoid any criticism of the Queen herself, the Labor party chiefs announced they are calling a new meeting of policy planners to discuss the method of selection.

"We believe it is important that parties themselves should decide on their leaders," said deputy leader James Griffiths, "and that the Crown should not be put in the embarrassing position of having to make a choice between rival claimants for the premiership from the same party."

Griffiths said the party's planners will consider the possibility of a motion of censure to be introduced when Parliament convenes Jan. 22.

While Labor leaders discussed strategy Macmillan and Churchill dined alone at Churchill's Hyde Park home. As Macmillan was leaving, he said to his host:

"I have come to the fountain of all wisdom. Will you wish me well?"

Churchill pulled a long black cigar from his left hand and puffed Macmillan's hand with his right.

"Indeed, I do, I do," said the 82-year-old elder statesman.

Labor Party sources said an editorial in the powerful Times of London first raised the question discussed Friday night. "Situations which faced the Queen yesterday are not likely to occur often," The Times said. "If they did, the modern difficulties of the position and the procedure would need to be examined more closely."

"Time and events will show how wisely she judged."

Nova Scotia MPs Unhappy Over Gordon Proposals

(From Times News Services)

Two Nova Scotians on the Opposition side of the House spoke scornfully Friday of a royal commission's suggestion that Atlantic province citizens move to other parts of Canada to improve their lot.

Clarke Gillis (CCF, Cape Breton South) said the report of the Gordon economic commission, issued Thursday, "writes the Maritimes off pretty well."

George Nowlan (PC, Digby-Annapolis-Kings) said that of 60,000 words in the report "there are about 12½ words of comfort for the Maritime provinces."

He spoke sarcastically of the commission's proposal for "generous assistance" to those who might want to leave the Atlantic provinces.

"At least they are going to treat us as well as the Hungarians have been treated," he said, referring to government payment for passage to Canada of Hungarian refugees.

He called for immediate revision of the Maritime Freight Rates Act—a measure originally intended to QUESTION: "What do you think of Reeve Arthur Ash's proposal to split Saanich with half to the city and the rest to Central Saanich?"

ANSWER: Jack McCubbin, proprietor, variety store, 2537 Roseberry: "I think it's a very good idea. It's a practical compromise with the plan to unite all municipalities."

Cliff Bennett, TV technician, 1875 Allenby: "Good idea. The sooner we reach amalgamation the better. We'd all benefit from a unified Greater Victoria and it's about time it took place."

ANSWER: Mrs. P. MacGregor, 2566 Forbes: "I think we should amalgamate into Greater Victoria. If we all got together we could do a lot more and at the same time cut down on overlapping services."

ANSWER: Mrs. Fred Lockett, 1775 Adanac: "I'd like to see amalgamation of all the municipalities—none of these half measures. We lived in Toronto when the municipalities ran into the same problem. They amalgamated but kept their individual councils. I'm in favor of amalgamation with one council."

ANSWER: Mrs. Norman Hartley, 2700 Asquith: "It's probably a good idea. They could split costs and revenue and it always helps to pull together in everything. Saanich would help the city financially and would benefit in other ways."

ANSWER: Hugh Hollingworth, butcher, 1508 Hautain: "I'm in favor of it. I'd prefer total amalgamation but I think this is a step towards it. It would cut down costs if all the districts operated from one central City Hall."

Hungary Student Leaders Arrested

BUDAPEST (Reuters)—Hungarian police arrested eight university student leaders Friday on the eve of a planned meeting of the Hungarian Students' Federation, formed at the start of the revolution last October.

Communist newspapers said a full-scale meeting of the federation, which was to have been attended here today by delegates from all over Hungary, had been postponed "for technical reasons."

University students were in the forefront of the demonstrations of Oct. 23 which touched off the nationalist armed uprising.

News of the students' arrest arrived with reports that the government of Premier Janos Kadar is trying to promote a rival student organization, to be called the Association of Young Workers, which would rally wholeheartedly behind Hungary's Communist leaders.

Reports from Csepel Island, the largest industrial concentration in Budapest, said at least five workers were killed and up to 20 injured when Communist militia opened fire Friday on demonstrating clerical workers.

Workers said some of the giant iron and steel plants on the island did not resume work today in protest over the incident.

Workers said that after the incident the bodies of the dead men were placed near a wall under an inscription: "Kadar's present to the workers."

MOSCOW (AP)—The Kremlin seems to be throwing in increasing weight into keeping its satellites in line.

Poland is the centre of attention right now. One aim of Red Chinese Premier Chou En-lai's current visit to Warsaw apparently is to try and convince the restless Poles that the interests of world communism take precedence over the national interests of individual Communists countries.

This is the line the Kremlin laid down when it sent Soviet troops to quell the uprising in Hungary.

The old age pension should not be regarded as an existence allowance but as a right of older persons to share in the country's prosperity.

Mr. Knowles said there were reports last year the government planned to increase the pension. But no mention was made of that in the throne speech outlining the session's legislative program.

"Apparently the government thinks it has nothing to worry about—that it's got the election in the bag," he said.

Mr. Knowles said that if the government is not prepared to increase old age pensions, then it should immediately set up a parliamentary committee to study the whole problem of pensions, including the Canadian Labor Congress suggestion for establishment of a national industrial pension system.

FULL FREEDOM OF OPERATIONS in Suez Canal clearance by UN received Egypt's blessing Friday, secretary Dag Hammarskjold revealed. He estimates the job will be completed by May. U.S. Backs 3-Stage Suez Settlement Plan

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United States today threw its support behind a three-stage plan to achieve a Suez Canal agreement by the time it is open for first traffic.

Officials expected that Suez talks under sponsorship of U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold would begin in New York "very soon." They expressed hope the negotiations would lead to a settlement despite the pressure of time and Israel's lagging withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula and the Gaza Strip.

American-French hopes for a speedy settlement of the Suez controversy were discussed Friday by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau.

France is reported pressing for a "temporary status" agreement for the canal if a permanent agreement is not reached by early March when the canal is expected to be cleared sufficiently for first through traffic.

Under a temporary plan, the canal would be under UN jurisdiction and operation pending a final settlement.

As understood here, the three-stage plan for Suez talks calls first for Hammarskjold to act as an intermediary between Egypt on the one hand and France and Britain on the other. If this first stage is successful, the three nations' representatives would meet together later in Hammarskjold's New York office. Finally, the talks would be broadened to include other nations.

The Gordon Report

NO SNAP JUDGMENT SHOULD be given on a document so voluminous, complex and controversial as the Gordon report.

But it can be seen at once that the Royal Commission, appointed by a Liberal Government, has quarreled openly with many of that Government's policies and it has given substantial support to the general policies of the Conservative Party. In setting up the Commission the Government appears to have hatched something of a political cockatrice.

Certainly the politicians of all parties will try to exploit this document for their own purposes. The Government will reject some of its recommendations. The Conservatives will read into it a doctrine of economic protectionism. Even the C.C.F. may find there some support for its view that our economy is not being quite perfectly managed.

The Commission's findings will be examined here in more detail later. In the meantime four points stand out sharply and they will be the focus of much political debate from now on.

First, the Commission is in favor of some restriction—it does not say how much—on the export of vital raw Canadian materials like minerals.

This recommendation obviously contradicts the present Government's policy and supports the views of the Conservative Party. The oldest argument in Canadian political history—the argument too loosely called free trade versus protectionism—is thus revived.

When the Conservative Party can point to a royal commission as supporting its historic theories (and no doubt will exaggerate that support) we shall certainly hear more of this subject between now and the election.

Second, the Commission favors the export of hydro power to the United States in flat contradiction of a policy enforced not only by the present Government but by former Conservative Governments. But it should be noted that no unrestricted export is proposed. The Commission would permit only the sale of fractional volumes of power not presently needed in Canada and would make sure—presumably by treaty—that Canada recovered this power when it was needed here.

This is an attractive and highly dangerous idea. For once we start exporting power we may never get it back. That lesson has been learned already in the case of some Ontario power. Here against the Government is unlikely to agree with the Commission. Nor is the Conservative Party.

Third, the Commission finds that our tariffs as they stand are about right and should not be changed. But it throws very cold water on the Liberal Party's long-sustained hope that tariffs may be systematically reduced in Canada and elsewhere during the visible future. This the Commission regards as a wishful thinking and therefore, it says, we should hold our present barriers against imports.

The Commission's views in this area probably will suit the Government but they will not suit the low-tariff elements in the Liberal Party especially on the prairies.

Fourth, the Commission proposes a system of strict production quotas on our wheat farms and this plan is calculated to produce strong protest throughout the prairies.

On the other hand, the Commission agrees with the farmers that they should be paid on the farm for their grain and should not have to wait until the elevators can find space for it. In this respect the Commission repudiates the policy which Mr. Howe has managed to maintain in spite of strong political opposition. Mr. Howe's feelings are easily imagined.

Many other aspects of the report will require careful consideration. It is clear at the start of the national debate, however, that Mr. Gordon has decided to invite the anger of such powerful figures as Mr. Howe and it seems unlikely, therefore, that Mr. St. Laurent will carry through the plan to appoint Mr. Gordon to the cabinet.

The Royal Commission's report, in short, is an unexpected, unplanned, and Ottawa, probably an unwelcome catalyst in our politics. Its results cannot be foreseen.

The Trains Are Running

THE FORMULA DEVISED BY Mr. St. Laurent to settle the C.P.R. strike is probably the best obtainable under all the circumstances.

While the report of three judges on the firemen's union claims will not be binding, the Prime Minister says that the results of a full public inquiry would carry such weight of public opinion behind them that they would strongly influence the union and company positions.

Obviously this is a compromise between the railway and the union. The railway management demanded an arbitration which would be binding, but under the pressure of the Government has yielded. The union demanded an investigation which would not bind it to accept the resulting judgment, but, if Mr. St. Laurent is right, the union will be compelled to abide by the decision of the three judges.

This is not compulsory arbitration.

in name—a principle to which the unions are naturally opposed—but its results, on the basis of Mr. St. Laurent's forecast, seem to represent compulsory arbitration in fact.

The claims of the union for arrangements which the railway and probably most of the public consider unsound may now be left confidently to a tribunal of independent Canadians and meantime the trains will run.

In some ways Mr. St. Laurent's formula is unsatisfactory, since it leaves the whole issue of the strike unsettled. But possibly it is the best available solution and the Prime Minister deserves credit for devising it.

It is to be hoped that by next October a permanent settlement may have been found for the problem. If such is the result an important precedent will have been set not only for railways, but for all industrial activity feeling the impact of automation.

As Our Readers See It

Wants Business Tax

Ald. J. D. Smith was appointed chairman of a committee to investigate the business tax or city trade licence a few months ago. Several times the members of the committee refused to work on the committee until at last Ald. A. Curtis accepted. A public meeting was called, for all those who wished to bring up their views.

Ald. J. D. Smith made the main plank in his platform that he would fight for a fair business tax for the city, so as to have business pay its fair share of the expense of running the city. This report was drafted up at much time and expense, and was put on the table at the City Council meeting on Monday, Jan. 7, 1957, and was objected to by Ald. A. Curtis and the mayor. It was lifted off the table by a vote of seven to one, without even being heard. What way of doing business is this? Just a very small majority do not want anything done about the business tax, because it affects them, while the increase in property tax does not affect them as they do not live in the city. But according to those aldermen it is all right for the property owners and taxpayers who live in the city to carry on the expense of the city.

Ald. Smith did the only thing possible when he refused to work on another committee to thresh chaff all over again on the whim of the mayor.

CHEK Trouble

Phil Lee's column appearing in your paper of Jan. 8 has momentarily upset my equilibrium and I feel it should not go unanswered, and I do not think he will disagree with my words.

First of all may I say that his column is a valuable one to all TV fans who more or less choose their evening's entertainment with his guidance.

He says in his article, "we are finding it difficult to believe that reports of local CHEK-TV's interference with Channel 5 are quite as severe as made out in some quarters" and again "it does seem that if the situation is as critical as some would make out, the paper would have received far more complaints than that."

There are hundreds, if not thousands, in my position who are suffering from a black-out of Channel 5 and some of our favorite programs. I have discussed it with my neighbors. Before the station was built, we made a strong protest to Mr. Ash, who rode rough-shod over our ideas and intimated that the station was of the utmost importance to the municipality and we, its property owners and taxpayers, meant little in the scheme of things. We told him that the proximity of the station would detract from the value of our property but it got us exactly nowhere. We now read that he is not going to stand again as reeve. We do not believe he would have been re-elected.

It may interest your readers to know that I paid for a Sims trap to be installed. I had read their advertising, on the understanding that if it did not work I would be refunded my money in full. It did not help and the trap was removed but the firm installing it did not keep their bargain and only a partial refund was made to me—the balance being deducted for service which had been provided for when the installation was made.

Sims distributors might like to know about that and I will supply the firm's name. H. C. WILLIAMSON, 3405 Cedar Hill Road.

He's Willing

Ald. Donald Smith has resigned as chairman of our city's trades licence committee—in the face of hostile opposition by Mayor Surrath and tacitly supported by some of the aldermen.

Therefore our city's antiquated and unjust trades licence muddle—instead of a fair and equitable business tax system—shall go on. The homeowners in Victoria—"the little fellows"—have been in the past and still are the helpless victims of this "do-nothing" policy. Yet at the last city election Victoria's citizens had clearly endorsed the business tax scheme for our city this year. Our mayor and a few of his supporters have snubbed the wishes of our citizens. The majority of Victoria's tax-payers are being ignored and insulted.

What is the remedy? As a homeowner, I demand that Mayor Surrath resign forthwith. I also challenge any alderman of our city—except Ald. Smith—to resign his seat over this vital issue, the trades licence chaos or an equitable business tax system in our city, and I'll only too glad to stand as a candidate for alderman and let our citizens decide. This is an honest challenge, and a clear-cut issue.

IVAN W. HANCHARD, Ph. D. 1091 Joan Crescent.

Distortion

Herewith a word re the opinion given by your TV Editor, Mr. Phil Lee, in the Jan. 8 edition of the Victoria Daily Times.

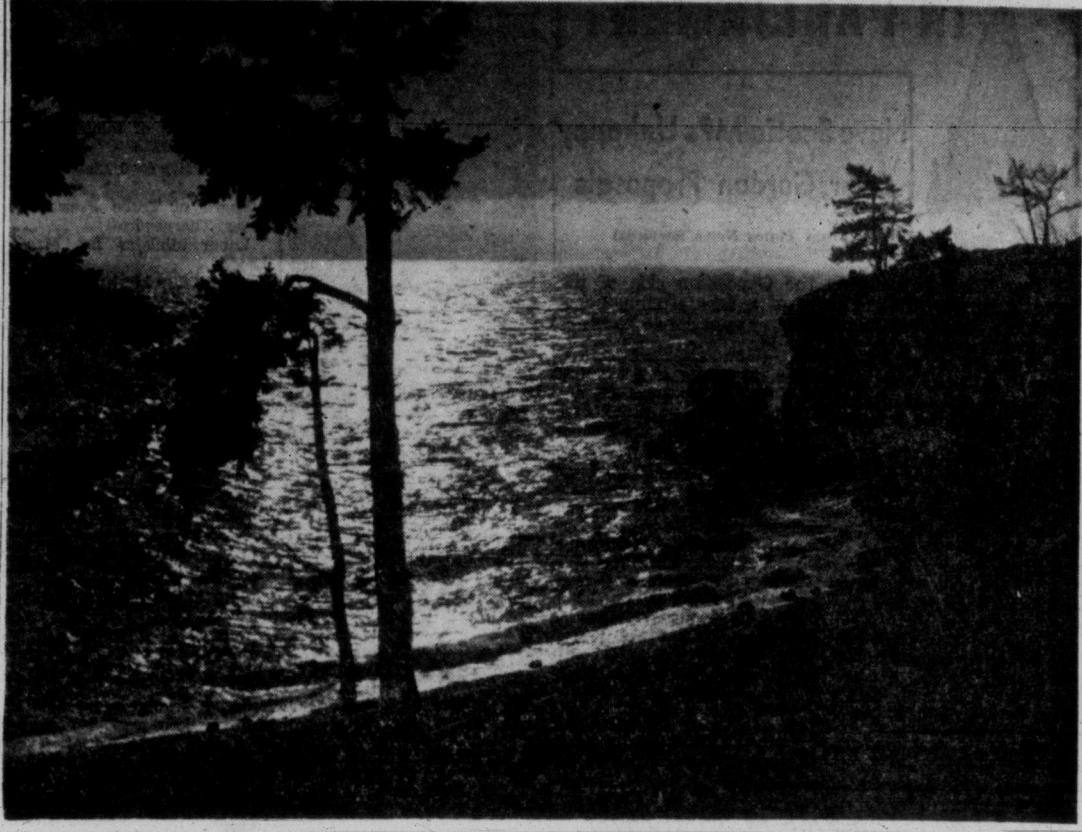

Mr. Lee infers that interference from Channel 6 is practically negligible judging by the poll he has compiled from letters he requested viewers to write concerning their reception of Channel 6. Receiving but few such letters, and not at all with complaints, Mr. Lee has decided that the 26,000 TV set-owners in the Greater Victoria area are well satisfied with this black cloud Mr. Armstrong and his associates have thrown over local TV screens.

May we assure him that this is not the case! Far from it! We have spoken to but one set-owner who has not been cursed with distortion or complete loss of Channel 5, to say nothing of noticeable interference on other channels. The fact that more letters and complaints have not been received by Mr. Lee and the Victoria Times can, we're sure, be attributed not to the lack of interference from Channel 6, nor yet to public apathy, but to the Festive Season, during which there is little time for the voicing of one's criticism in letters to the paper.

Surely Mr. Armstrong would not be trying to calm public resentment with his promise to move his transmitter to Salt Spring Island (pending permission, etc., etc., etc.) were he not plagued by strong criticism from many Victoria viewers.

Death at Moose Jaw

FOR the last month I have been living

almost entirely on trains. It is a good way to live. I have about decided, indeed, to sell my house and live on trains for the brief remainder of my life. The first great advantage of a train-life is its freedom from responsibility. Everything is arranged by someone else. The meals are produced on time. There is no need to cut wood for a fire, as I do on most days of the year. There is no kind-hearted woman to rearrange your desk and mislay all your precious papers. There is no desk, no paper.

Above all, there are no telephones and no friends to ring you up and discuss the ruin of the world. There is nothing but a motion picture sliding by, without admission fee, outside the window.

THUS hermetically sealed from reality, a man could live his life without a moment of trouble, could reach the end of it without knowing anything unpleasant, could travel first-class all the way without entering the day coaches of humanity.

For example, I happened to spend New Year's Eve on a train. It was the best New Year's Eve I ever spent. As the train rolled eastward into the darkness I was comfortably denoted in a much better room than I could afford at home and my sympathy went out to all my friends back in Vancouver and Victoria who were facing a dreadful night.

THEY could not curl up, like me, with a book, a glass, a pipe and a porter ready to answer the bell at any moment. They were dressed in hard shirts, writhing through some crowded ballroom, poisoning themselves with alcohol and canapes, staggering home at dawn with nothing to show for their heavy expenditures but a heavy hangover.

All to please some woman who regarded New Year's Eve, as a night out while I was enjoying, at much smaller cost in money and labor, a night in.

Next morning I did not face a ghostly dawn, a headache and a series of stuffy New Year's receptions. I faced the calm white spectacle of the Rockies that have seen more New Years than they can remember.

I did not face breakfast with nausea but with a good appetite. I did not face my family and friends with the usual hollow greetings of the season which no one believes. I faced the untroubled face of nature with whom it is always a Happy New Year.

BEST of all, there was no human face in sight outside the window, only a bull moose and a deer, who nodded briefly and went about their business. None of my friends back in the city would have shown such consideration. I cannot remember any New Year's Day so comfortable, peaceful and sane when my only companion was the late G. K. Chesterton, who spoke to me out of an old book and fell silent whenever I closed it.

But if I was thus insulated from the madness of the world, I had reason to know that the isolation was artificial and precarious. For that train was itself a snorting, flaming portent of our society. It was the last C.P.R. train out of Vancouver before the strike and Victoria who were facing a dreadful night.

SOCIETY had built many wonderful things, this train among them, had equipped itself with every convenience and comfort, had learned to move at a

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG

Tragedy and Heroism Met in the Strait

THERE is a piece of foreshore below Beacon Hill that is very like parts of the lovely Sussex Downs, particularly that bit from Seaford to about Bexhill with old Eastbourne roughly in the centre. Most like our seafront is a section of the down which rises sharply east of Seaford in a series of gentle undulations of bramble-covered springy turf. Our foreshore has the same type of close-knit turf, both below Beacon Hill and around Macauley Point; it looks southward over a broad expanse of sea and the trees cling precariously but tenaciously above the rocks. All the trees and shrubs, you will notice, have "crew cuts" as their foliage is trimmed by the spanking winds that whip in from the Pacific around Race Rocks.

The main difference, of course, is that the cliffs that fall from the downs are of chalk and ours are of hard green rock or clay.

In the First World War I fell in love with the downs and with the ancient villages behind them and the cliff-foot where the sea tumbled over the shingle. And it was probably largely because since childhood I had loved our own beautiful coastline.

June in January

Even in January I remember days of sun and wind more like May or June than mid-winter when we could play on the beaches or among the rock, hauling out long hollow pipes of kelp or picking up those smaller seaweeds that we could "pop" between our fingers. And the sea would murmur throatily in the miniature bays and hollows with the gentle rise and fall of the waves.

With great good luck we'd see one the proud white Empress ships that then connected us with the Orient, creaming in with a "boye in her teeth" to the old outer wharves; or even a windship with sails furled in tow to her berth.

One of these I remember was the Olivebank—a great four-masted which the Cunard Line used as a training ship for cadets. I was once permitted to swarm up to the cross-trees from which the lovely long, slim ship looked unreal and fragile but beautiful beyond words.

But there were days in January when the wind would whip the breath from your mouth and you could not stand up straight on the lip of the cliffs in front of Beacon Hill. And the sea was no longer friendly but lashed into a cold grey fury with the waves tops blown off in a salty spindrift that clouded the windows on houses on Dallas Road.

It was still fun but entirely different. Your cheeks glowed and your heart pumped fast under the buffeting of the gale and there was a sort of intoxication—a mild madness—in it.

Such a day was Friday, Jan. 8, 1904, just 53 years ago last Tuesday. A day to remember—a day still remembered by many of Victoria's oldtimers.

On that terrible day a wooden ferry

BALANCE OF NATURE

An answer to the pessimists was given at the British Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. G. V. Jacks, a famous soil expert. His argument was that there was a series of phases in man's relationship to the soil—the first is the struggle to adjust himself to the existing balance of nature either by pastoral nomadism or by shifting cultivation in the forest lands. Then, with increasing population he upsets the balance of nature by settled agriculture, with risks of exhaustion of the soil.

Then, communities concentrate in towns, creating new wealth in manufacturing, commerce and arts, and to get food for their people the cities pour wealth back into the soil and create a new fertility. Here we have the paradox—the fewer people on the land, the more food it can produce for the people off the land. He posed the question, will the world of 100 years hence be able to feed the 6,000,000 people who will then be on it?

The answer is yes, provided most of the wealth to pay for the food they need. As every farmer knows, it pays to fertilize and keep the land in good heart when the market is good.

ship, the SS. Clallam was nosing her way from Seattle to Victoria; touching at Port Townsend on the way. She was only about six months off the ways and her skipper, Capt. George Roberts, saw no reason to let a winter southwester alter his schedule.

There was reason enough, however, and the poor ship as she left the shelter of Port Townsend met the full fury of the gale. By then it was too late to turn back and the little vessel pushed her nose into the seas and headed for Victoria, making roughly it would seem, for Trial Island.

Not long after leaving Port Townsend the chief engineer reported the ship water fast and, with Capt. Roberts, he found a broken deadlight through which the sea poured into the vessel.

It was the beginning of the end but the poor little ship hung on to some sort of a course although her chance of making harbor at Victoria was steadily reduced as she was blown eastward.

Along the rocky shore of Shoal Bay and off the Oak Bay golf links hundreds of Victoria citizens watched in helpless horror as dusk fell, cloaking the tragedy being enacted before their eyes.

HANS GRUBER CONDUCTS

Jovial Mood With Syncopation Spices Neglected Beethoven

The law of compensation, the natural human search for change or variety—these mysterious compunctions cause us naturally, even unconsciously, to seek a change from one type of activity to another. If one's work is of sedentary nature, the holidays of such a one will likely take the form of outdoor exercise, whereas a professional athlete's vacation is as likely as not spent indoors.

If we have been reading classical plays, reaction will inevitably set in, and detective novels will, for a while, become the order of the evening.

This is apropos the first hearing in Victoria tomorrow afternoon and Monday evening of Beethoven's 4th Symphony. Beethoven, too, was subject to the most abrupt changes in mood, and they occurred with unfailing regularity. It could not have escaped the most casual listener how a dramatic symphony is followed by a lyrical, even romantic one, and vice versa.

Eliminating the first two symphonies and the "Jenae" symphony written before the so-called first, we find that Nos. 3, 5, 7 and 9 Hans Gruber are of dramatic, trail-blazing variety, in which Beethoven "shook his fists at the heavens" as ferociously as only he could.

Odd and Even Reveal Mood Contrasts

The even-numbered symphonies, on the other hand, are wholly different in mood. After the 3rd symphony, Beethoven had adequately spent his fury at Napoleon's treachery. After the 5th, "fate" had been conquered. After the 7th, rhythm had been once and for all defeated. And with the completion of the 9th symphony, simply nothing more remained as he said.

The 5th symphony was followed by that epitome of serenity, the "Pastorale," and the 7th by the boisterous and unbroken laughter of the 8th.

And the "Eroica" was, not naturally, followed by the 4th, in all that that implies. For you will be amazed, perhaps, to find Beethoven capable of such simplicities of mood as "pervade this most neglected of Beethoven's masterpieces."

The B-flat symphony begins, like the first, second, and seventh, with a slow introduction, remarkable for the paucity of notes and the length of time it takes to play them!

In the hands of a lesser composer such a thing could lead to disastrous boredom, making those 4 minutes seem like 40. But Beethoven projects tension here even in the silent rests; not until the joyful allegro begins are we aware that Beethoven has played a joke on us, in that he almost succeeded

Epic's Plural Pianos And a Brahms Quintet

By HUMPHRY DAVY

In 1779 Mozart wrote a sparkling and unpretentious concerto for two keyboards to play with his sister, Nannerl. Today the work has become one of his best-known and most frequently played compositions for this K245, for three pianos and orchestra.

These two works were undoubtedly written for harpsichords. That does not mean the music is simple and easy to play. It takes athletic fingers to cope with Mozart's elaborate figuration.

Epitomized also is released Brahms Quintet in B. Minor for clarinet and string quartet, opus 115. The work is performed by the Budapest String Quartet with David Oppenheim, clarinet. Some critics claim this is one of Brahms best and most dramatic chamber works, but I fail to be impressed. Perhaps more frequent hearings of this composition may convince me. Otherwise the performance is good. The disc is a valuable addition for collectors of chamber music.

POPS LIBRARY — Among Broadway musical comedies on new albums and the one that makes the best listening is "I'll Abner" (Columbia). It has plenty of bounce and humor as well as rousing songs.

(A Michael Balcon Production)

Starring JAMES HAWKINS with DOROTHY ALISON and a Brilliant All-English Supporting Cast

"The Long Arm" is one of those films which we unfortunately recommend to all lovers of good old British films. It is not only a first class "Cops and Robbers" story, but authentically takes you behind the scenes of "Scotland Yard" and shows you exactly what happens when an expert criminal is captured. It is perfectly cast as Inspector Halliday and plays his part to perfection. One of the best British films of the year.

A VISITOR FROM THE NORTH POLE

Fooling WITH CARDS

There's always room for another trick in one's after-dinner repertoire. Try this one:

The performer takes a deck and deals two piles of three cards each, dealing the cards one at a time. He turns up the first pile and shows that it contains three jacks. He gathers up the cards and repeats the deal; again the first stack consists of three jacks. Each time the deal is repeated, in fact, three jacks turn up in the first stack.

While this is apparently a trick of skillful manipulation, it is, in reality, of simple execution.

Four jacks actually figure in the deal. Three jacks are on top of the deck; followed by an indifferent card; then a fourth jack; and a second indifferent card. The cards are dealt one at a time to each pile; the sixth card, however, is slipped under the second pile, and is used as a lever to pick up the pile and put it back on the deck. Then the first pile is shown to contain three jacks which are replaced on the deck—the cards are now again "stacked" to repeat.

What can you think of that

It's not every day that the city gets a visitor from the North Pole. But today there's cause for rejoicing—that is, there was. Can you put the new arrival back in the picture above?

A SHORT TALE

Whenever Mr. Stice who is rather absent-minded forgets his own party-line number, he thinks of this experience and presto, the number comes to year old.

Friendly, graceful black and white spring spaniel type is Patty. Very good with the youngsters, a medium-sized dog suited to country or city.

IT'S A TREE STUMPER

Four fruit-growers have altogether 1,000 trees. Aye has 10 more trees than Bee. Bee has 20 more than Cee and Cee has 30 more than Dee. How many trees has Dee?

BIONDA'S BOXLA FUTURE UP TO HIM, SAYS LYNN

Whether or not Jack Bionda plays lacrosse for the Victoria Shamrocks this summer will be up to Bionda himself, according to Lynn Patrick, general manager of the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

Patrick, who took Bionda up to the Bruins this year, said Friday night that he would not prevent Bionda from playing lacrosse in the off-season but that he would not encourage his rookie star.

Patrick said, "I won't order Jack not to play lacrosse. But I will point out the pitfalls and the disadvantages he faces if he is injured badly enough in lacrosse to harm his hockey career. If he still wants to play then, I will not stop him."

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

By Denny Boyd

You'd have to walk many a back-court before you'd see two basketball types of such contrasting cut as Norm Baker and Art Chapman.

Just their appearance, for instance: Norm's hair is blonder than the cork in a bleach bottle.

Art's hair is . . . well, there's quite a contrast.

Art is an affable, even-tempered type whose great court skill was his scheming mind.

Norm is a fiery, go-to-blazes competitor whose demonic smile can infuriate opponents.

Art and Norm came up through Victoria's greatest basketball days, those rousing days of the Domino teams that moved across Canada like a scythe, leaving a shambles of broken teams behind them.

After the days of the Dominos, Art and Norm rode the rods as pros together in a short but madcap and memorable stint with Vancouver Hornets in the ill-fated professional league that flamed briefly and then was blown out by the hot breaths of creditors.

It was yeoman fare, that pro basketball. You had to be good, you had to be smart, you had to be tough, you had to have some sense of humor.

How good did you have to be?

Well, there was a night when the Hornets were playing Bellingham against Galt Bishop's Bells. Norm had played a meager first half and, as a consequence, the Hornets trailed most of the way. With a little more than a minute left, the Hornets were five points down and Norm was still playing in a stony silence.

Three Long Ones—Six Points

But Baker took a pass near the side, ran a couple of steps over centre and let fly with one of those suicide one-handers of his. It whisked through the hoop and the Bells took the ball to protect what was suddenly only a three-point lead.

The Bells threw a pass under the Hornet basket and Baker snatched it out of the air. Again he dribbled over centre and uncorked his one hander. Swish, and it was a one-point lead.

The quaking Bells now had only one thought with 20 seconds left. Keep the ball away from that blank-blank Baker.

But Norm cornered a desperately retreating Bellingham player near the side-lines, grabbed the ball out of his hands and literally threw it at the Bellingham basket. The ball dropped through the cords as the whistle sounded and the Hornets had a one-point victory.

How smart did you have to be?

One time the Hornets were playing in Portland and they were one point down in the last minute of play.

Chapman had the ball near the side-lines and was being soundly checked by a fellow named John Mondich. Art didn't have a chance to shoot but he came up under Mondich as if he was going to make the longest lay-up in the history of the game. Art poked into Mondich's arms, the referee obligingly called a foul and Art dunked both shots for a one-point victory.

How tough did you have to be?

One night a guy named Bob Vekelert jammed an elbow in Norm's face and Norm dropped his opponent with a large handful of fist.

A fan called Norm nasty things so Norm repeated the treatment on the cash customer. That one cost Baker a $100 fine.

One Good Slap Deserved Another

Another time, a referee called a foul on Baker and, to emphasize his point, slapped Norm on the back. The slap knocked Baker to his knees so he got up and slapped the referee down. That cost him another $100.

As for the sense of humor, Baker had to have one that time the club was driving back from a road game. Norm had purchased a gleaming new car that was the pride of his life. Richie Nicol was sitting in the back seat, sipping a beer and cracking peanuts from a 50-cent bag.

Norm didn't mind so much Richie littering the back seat ankle deep in peanut shells but when Nicol tossed his empty through the window without first opening the window, Norm found it a trifle hard to smile.

Well, all that is in the past now. Norm is a policeman and Art is a successful salesman in Vancouver.

But they'll both be back in the basketball scene tonight at Central Junior High School gym. Norm as a playing coach and Art as a bench coach.

And don't think they won't relive a lot of memories tonight. The years can't erase those.

Stan Four Under Par To Share Second Spot

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Lachute, Que., shot a 68 Friday to tie with four other pros in second place in Bing Crosby's $15,000 U.S. amateur golf tournament.

The leader after the first round was Texan Billy Maxwell, who took over from his twin brother, Bobby, with a six-under-par 66.

The other pros scoring 68 were Bobby Maxwell, veteran Byron Nelson, Bob Rosburg of Palo Alto, Calif., and Bill Nary of Tucson, Ariz.

All played the tree-sheltered Monterey Peninsula Country Club course, a distinct advantage over those who toured the tricky, wind-whipped Cypress Point layout along the ocean. Each course plays par 72.

Defending champion Cary Middlecoff, the U.S. Open titlist, who won this event the last two years, was among the victims of Cypress Point. He wound up with a 76.

Veteran Ellsworth Vines, who finished in a seven-way tie at 69, scored a hole-in-one at the 158-yard seventh.

Defeated with Vines were Joe Steiger, Spokane; Bill Martin, West Covina, Calif.; Smiley

Why Did Veterans Lose? Well, You Figure It Out

Age Made Difference

By IAN SMITH (Who Saw the Game)

Vic High Totems proved Friday night that age and experience are no match for youthful enthusiasm as they downed Victoria High's "All-Time Greats," 43-41.

Oldtimers, all former Vic High students who were members of Canadian Championship teams, said goodbye for good to the courts as they dropped their third game after seven consecutive wins in the annual classic.

The oldsters, who had maintained any practice sessions in stating that they needed to save their energy for the game, used the first half principally to sharpen their shooting eyes.

But while the veterans were acclimating themselves, the enthusiastic Totems were running every which-way, putting baskets, stealing rebounds and romping to a 18-5 lead in the first quarter.

The Oldtimers put on their checking clothes in the second quarter and stopped the Totems cold for the loss of only six points. However, the best the veterans could do for their own offence was a nine-point total and they trailed, 24-14, as they puffed gratefully into the dressing room for their half-time rest.

YOU SAID TO ME -

BY ETHEL TULL

A Sunday message of help and comfort for those puzzled, depressed or low in spirit.

You said to me, "I want to do the very best I can for my teenage children."

You tell me that you have the confidence of your children, and that is a very wonderful thing to be able to say. Trust between parents and children is the fruit of shared experience, and when God enters into the relationship, it becomes deeper and more vital.

I will try to give you an example of what I mean. There is a family of my acquaintance where the parents have tried not to impose their own will upon the children, but to lead them to make their own decisions in the light of the shared experience of father and mother, and the guidance received from God.

When a child has been in the habit of talking in his own words to our Lord Jesus Christ, he finds no difficulty in asking for help in the solution of the problems that are so real to him in his daily life. He has made a mistake—how shall he put it right? He needs help to face something that is hard to take—he needs strength to resist a temptation—where shall he go for the power he must have?

"Let's ask God about it," says father or mother, and a brief prayer is made. Then the family sits quietly together to listen for the answer, and afterwards tell each other the thoughts that have come to each one. Sometimes the child finds it difficult to obey the conviction that comes to his mind, but he is encouraged by a sense of the real presence of God, and also by the knowledge that parents, too, have their problems, and are prepared to act on the guidance that comes in quiet times with God.

Jesus set a definite goal for us to try to reach—absolute honesty, purity, unselfishness and love—and teenagers will readily see that if the whole world were to live by this standard, under the guidance of God, a great change would take place. How about enlisting your teenagers in the revolutionary army of God, to fight for a new world?

QORs Cheer Return to Victoria; Passes Issued for Night in Town

By AB KENT

"Oh, boy, we're home."

Similar sentiments were expressed almost to a man as 212 members of Second Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, rejoined their unit at Camp Gordon Head this morning.

Back from temporary duty with First Battalion, QORs, in Calgary, the force waited a month in Halifax expecting Middle East duty as United Nations police troops and got sub-zero weather in Calgary instead of sunburn in Suez.

Men arrived here on the 7 a.m. ferry from Vancouver after a CNR rail trip via Edmonton.

They had been given the opportunity of staying with the First Battalion, but only about 30 riflemen and NCOs preferred Calgary to Victoria. Some have their homes on the Prairies and wanted to be stationed nearby.

About 240 men, NCOs and one officer, Capt. Dan Woodbury, were in the draft which left here last Armistice Day.

After dumping rifles and kit at Camp Gordon Head, the single men in barracks drew bedding from quartermaster stores and then most headed for a big night in town.

They were disappointed at not getting to see the sights of the mysterious Middle East, but reassignment to their old unit in Victoria was compensation enough.

A big worry for some is having to start all over again with such items as car financing, since most owners let cars go at a sacrifice as soon as they learned they could volunteer for special force duty.

Men were still enthused about the treatment they received at the hands of hospitable Haligonians, who laid on free shows and entertainments, and guided tours.

Resumption of routine training is scheduled for next week, which will be the first crack at it for the younger men since completion of basic training last fall.

One 18-year-old rifleman was asked if he felt himself qualified to serve overseas with the amount of initial training he had received.

He felt he was, but personally would have liked to be more experienced before being assigned to overseas duty.

Minimum age of 19 years for overseas duty was reduced to 18 to enable the First Battalion to fulfill its establishment, and this action was questioned in Ottawa by Esquimalt-Saanich Member of Parliament, Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes.

All checked in at Gordon Head, QORs head for weekend "on the town."

From Beverly Baxter's London Letter in the current issue of Maclean's Magazine:

"...let me end this London Letter by returning for a moment to the prime minister. Last April I wrote in Maclean's that it was difficult to imagine Eden still in power in 1957. Unfortunately, Maclean's is a persistent globe trotter and has a surprisingly large number of readers in Britain, and I was confronted on many occasions with that unfortunate prophecy.

"Nothing dined, as the Irishman said, I now prophesy that Eden will lead his government with renewed strength and courage and wisdom."

"He will gain in confidence and reputation as the man who changed the United Nations from a talking shop into a world force, and in the process saved the Middle East from Communism and the evil overlordship of Russia.

"If this proves true—and I believe it will—then Eden will have won his place in history."

And Beverly Baxter has rightful place with all the other international forecasters.

But leave us move on to a happier subject.

Loyal constituents are aware of the Old Jokes Home which Between Times maintains, and will appreciate why a reservation has already been made for this comparatively new joke, which will, with the passing of time, become eligible for the Old Jokes Home.

A gentleman who had looked rather too earnestly upon the giggle juice was driving his car the wrong way up a one-way street.

An efficient policeman stepped off the curb, stopped the car, and in the classic phrase intoned "Where do you think YOU'RE going?"

Replied the hop-happy motorist:

"I dunno, offisher. But I must be late. Ever'body else ish comin' back."

Which reminds me of Our Very Own Definition of stiff competition.

TODAY'S BEEFS

Thursday at 5:15 p.m. I was stopped on Fort Street waiting in the curbside lane of traffic for the light to change on Blanshard. A middle-aged woman paused on the curb at my right, looked up at the traffic signal on Blanshard which had just changed to amber, and then doggedly began walking against the red light immediately in front of my car and the car on my left as we began to proceed across Blanshard with the green light. Fortunately for her we hesitated.

Second Fire In Vacant House Sparks Probe

Youths Questioned; Serious Damage

Second fire in 48 hours at an unoccupied house at 2819 Quesnel was under investigation today by city fire department and police officials.

Firemen were called to the house at 1:55 a.m. today and were at the scene an hour and a half extinguishing the flames, which caused considerable damage to the roof and attic.

Two youths, one 17 and the other 21, were brought to the police station at 2:30 a.m. and questioned by Fire Chief Frank Briers and detectives. They were later released.

TWO QUESTIONED

The youths were picked up at Manchester and Burnside, near the fire, after Chief Briers called police.

The first fire broke out at 2 a.m. Thursday and did extensive damage to one room.

Fire department officials said after that blaze that they were not sure of the cause.

Three trucks attended to day's fire and the last one didn't leave until 3:16 a.m.

Investigations into the fire were continuing today and it was believed the provincial fire marshal's office would be called in.

Man Slightly Hurt In 40-MPH Tumble From Car

Campbell was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where he was found to have a cut on the side of his head and bruises on his arm and right leg.

He was scheduled to return to hospital today for a further checkup.

Courtenay Gets 14 Inches; 400 Phones Out

Most of Vancouver Island north of Mill Bay was covered today by heavy, slushy snow that disrupted telephone and telegraph services, and knocked out 400 telephones in the Courtenay area.

Snow fell steadily Friday, with up to 5 inches at Duncan and Nanaimo, but at Courtenay a total of 14 inches was recorded.

At Black Creek, 10 miles north of Courtenay, the snowfall measured 24 inches.

Despite the heavy snow, traffic has been able to move and there have been no serious accidents.

TRAFFIC MOVES

Police at Duncan said there had been a few minor accidents, while at Nanaimo traffic is able to move "laboriously but without trouble."

"The snow is thawing fast today," Nanaimo police said.

Forecast now calls only for occasional flurries today and Sunday.

The heavy wet snow at Duncan has caused the worst breakdown in telegraph service in the last five or six years.

The worst breaks have been between Duncan and Nanaimo, but the lines to Victoria have also been badly affected. At one time there were seven breaks between here and Nanaimo.

Friday there was no service north or south from Duncan for three or four hours and all commercial teletype services were out.

Crews were handicapped because they had to use the highways to get to breaks instead of rail.

Friday's snow caused new breaks as fast as others were repaired.

A B.C. Telephone official in Courtenay said:

"All we have been doing for several days now is running up and down the countryside, with service being cut off everywhere."

BIG JOB

"The Hungarians arriving here next week are part of a contingent of 350 refugees who arrived Friday in Vancouver by train from Halifax. They are being medically examined and sorted out as to trades and professions before being sent to Victoria.

The majority of the Victoria-bound contingent—the largest to be sent here—will be composed of young men.

H.R.A. officials said their main problem in placing refugees in homes is to find people who can both accommodate and feed them.

"Several people have offered to house them, but without board," said an official. "This is understandable. They can't afford to board them due to the high price of food."

On the other hand, the association reported that several homes have offered to take in boys and girls. At the moment, it did not anticipate any difficulty in placing any of the women as there was a shortage of domestic help in Victoria.

Q.—Is it known what city in Canada first had dial telephones?

A.—Yes, it was Edmonton.

The device had been under consideration as early as 1905. It came into use in 1908, and it was a privately owned company that introduced it. The company ultimately was purchased by the city of Edmonton.

HAWAII

*The Islands That Draw
Sun-Loving Victorians*

Arranged By
Women's Editor
ELIZABETH FORBES

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. (Ted) Evans are shown on the terrace of the Edgewater Hotel, Waikiki Beach, just after their morning coffee. Mr. Evans, who owns his own fishing boat, and Mrs. Evans, musical director for Victoria high schools, took two and a half weeks to soak up Hawaii's Yuletide sun and balmy weather. The Evans live at 2114 Marne Street, in this city.

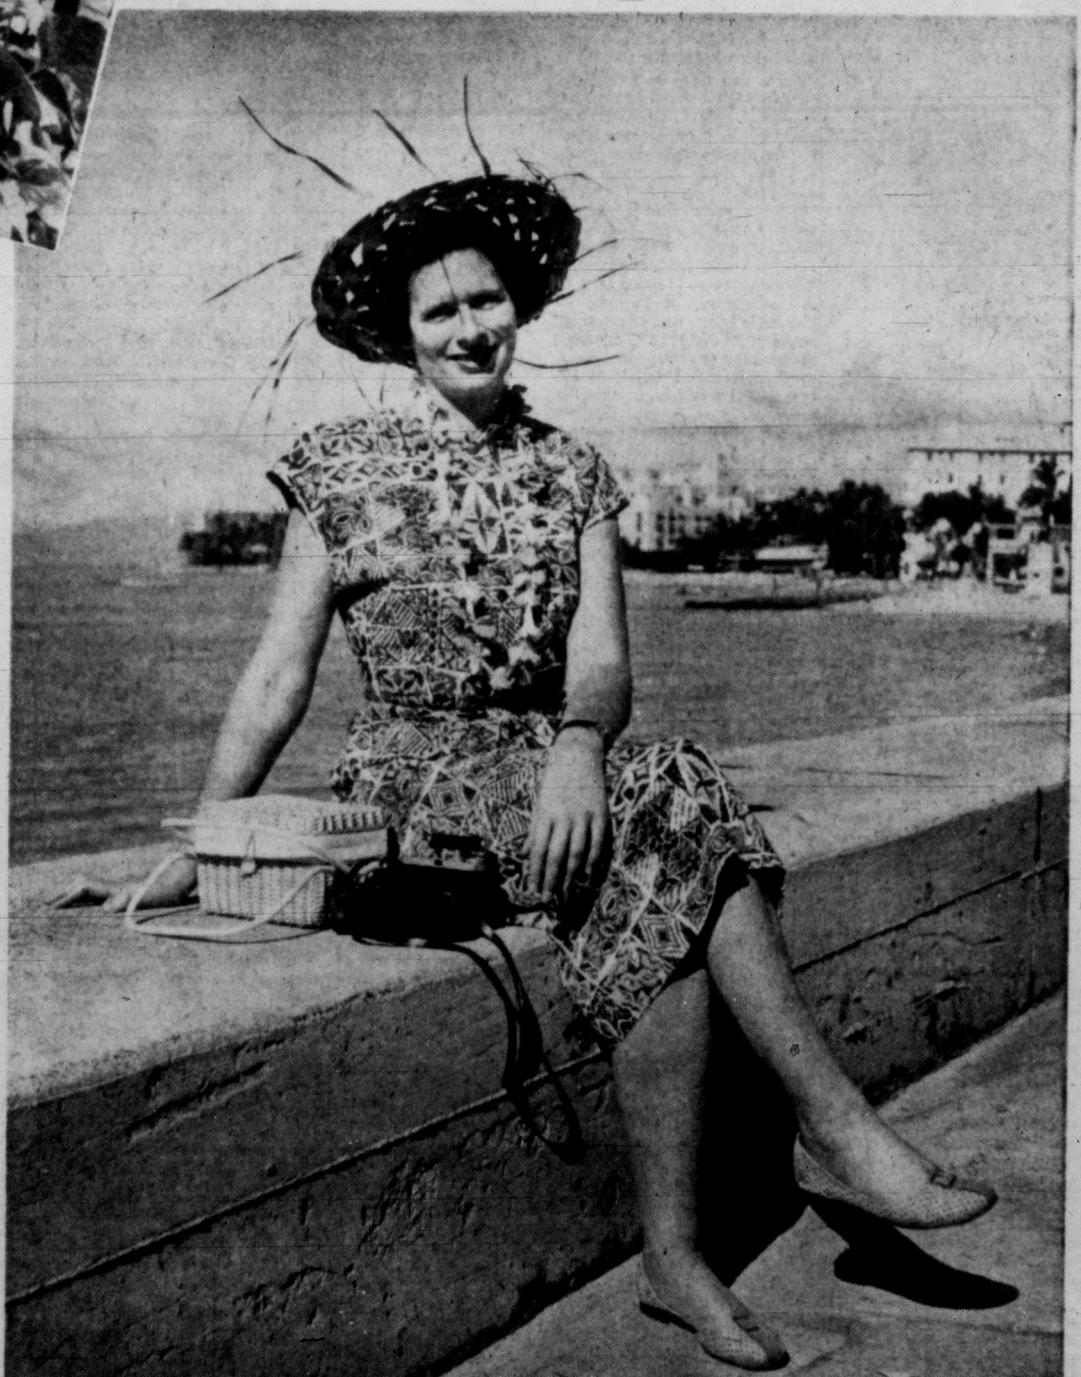

Mr. and Mrs. Robert (Dinty) Moore ponder a batch of tour folders while son Guy looks at the Sunday supplement of a Honolulu newspaper. The Moores, who stayed at The Breakers, spent about a month at Waikiki Beach and only returned to their home on Beach Drive a week ago. They travelled both ways by CPA.

For those Victorians privileged to leave this city during the dull days of winter, the sunny isles of Hawaii have, in recent years, become a "home away from home" and Waikiki is as familiar as their own front lawns. From mid-December until late spring these winter vacationists travel the skyways from Vancouver or Seattle, or by the more leisurely way of the luxury liners from San Francisco, to spend either a few days, weeks or several months in the sun.

China Story Book Dolls To Please the Wee Miss

By PENNY SAVER

In a downtown store I saw a demure but adventurous little girl with long hair and a pinafore dress standing with a tiny friend, the March hare. Why, of course, it's Alice in Wonderland! She and a host of other story book friends are cleverly formed of china, perfect for the youngsters' rooms. The little girls in the family especially will love the figurines of Miss Muffet, Goldilocks, Bo-Peep, the Queen of Hearts and Red Riding Hood, all the same size as Alice. On special occasions, birthdays, and just for fun, these figurines would be lovely gifts for the children. Miss Muffet holds a bowl and on her skirt is a cocky spider. Goldilocks is full of fun on the way to the Three Bears' house, and Bo-Peep with shepherd's crook, is looking for her sheep. The characters are easy to see, and the children will have fun discovering their identities. Each costs $1.98.

Hummel figurines, usually depicting children at different phases of play, work or prayer, are also favorites with children. A series of Hummel pictures, each different, is available in town at a very reasonable price. The set of five would be attractive in the nursery or any room of the house. Each picture costs $1.50.

A birthday in the offing? For a novel touch, serve the birthday cake on a musical, revolving cake plate. These novel plates are made in Germany and are hand-painted with flowers. You wind them up by merely turning the plate on its base in a counter-clockwise direction. The surface then rotates, clockwise, playing "Happy Birthday" all the while. Artistically-made, each costs $8.50. If you don't want to buy it, but merely to rent it, you can do that, too.

Call me at 2-3131 and I'll tell you where to find the items here in the column.

For these cold, blustery days, woolen gloves are just the thing. From Switzerland are the extra-long, fine-knit gloves that come in white, pink or yellow. On the backs are touches of pearl or gold thread decoration, to give them a dressy look. Formerly priced at $2.50, they are now selling for just $1.25. The extra arm length of the gloves is especially wonderful if the cuffs of your coat are loose. There are two lengths, both longer than average.

Extra little bargains I noticed in town were clear plastic punch servers, left over from the Christmas rush. These servers with curved handles are selling for just 85 cents. Long glass cocktail shaker sticks are 89 cents.

Call me at 2-3131 and I'll tell you where to find the items here in the column.

Want to Plant Your Own Herb Garden? Here Are Some Tips on How to Begin

A male reader of this column, "T.J." of Brentwood, wants very much to plan an herb garden this spring, and would like some advice.

I have already written him personally regarding seeds and plants. I also promised to give suggestions here on herb books available.

There are some very good books on culinary herbs and herb growing to be found in the Victoria

Public Library, and you should study one or two of these carefully, before planning your herb garden and selecting the herbs.

Another point, some herbs you may like and some may not be so palatable to you. Why not experiment a little with commercially dried herbs before growing them yourself? I studied herbs for three years before putting any of the products of my little herb farm on the New Zealand market!

Herbs are quite individualistic, but there is some resemblance between one and the other. It does however, take some time before you appreciate their finer points and can really use them with confidence.

Before getting hold of a new plant, I used to read all I could about a certain herb and then think carefully how I could use it; how much room it would take up in the garden; if it could be "heeled" later as a pot-plant; whether it could be home-dried successfully or not; and, lastly, whether it would thrive in our type of soil and in our rather dry summers.

By the trial and error method, I learned a lot about the different herbs and found herb-growing all the more interesting on that account.

BOOKS ON HERB-GROWING

Now let's get back to the list of books you'll be needing. Here they are:

"In an Herb Garden," Annie Burnham Carter.

"Herbs," Cora Louisa Brown.

"Green Enchantment: the Magic Spell of Gardens" (illustrated), Rosetta E. Clarkson.

"Magic Gardens" (a modern chronicle of herbs and savory seeds) (illustrated), Rosetta E. Clarkson.

"Complete Herbal" (illustrated), Nicholas Culpeper (1616-1654), one of the most famous herbalists.

"Magic in Herbs," Leonie de Sounin.

"Gardening With Herbs: For Flavor and Fragrance" (illustrated), Helen Fox.

"Modern Herbal," Maud Grieve.

"Leaves From John Gerard's Herball," arranged for garden-lovers, by Marcus Woodward.

"Old-Time Herbs for Northern Gardens," by Minnie Elizabeth Kamm.

"Green Medicine" (illustrated), by Hilda Leyel.

"An Artist's Herbal" (illustrated), Louise Mansfield.

"Spice and Scent: Herbs in Fact and Fancy" (illustrated), Maril Lee.

"Herbs for Health" (illustrated), Otto Mauser.

"Grandmother's Herbs and Simples" (illustrated), Julia Ann of The Times.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

This week I am giving the Question Box over to questions from Marathon Entrants.

Q. "Just what is a calorie?"

A. A calorie is a unit with which we measure the fuel value of foods. When we consume more calories than we need, the excess is then stored as fat.

Q. "Shall I wear my girdle when exercising?"

A. No. Take your girdle off.

Q. "What about water? Is it fattening?"

A. No. Water has no calories.

Q. "Does it matter how I divide my calories? Will it make any difference in my success in reducing?"

A. No. Just be sure to hold your daily intake to not more than 1400 calories a day. Most women reduce most successfully, and without discomfort, on 1200 a day.

Q. "Should I take steam baths and have massages in order to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks?"

A. Steam baths give you only a temporary loss, a water loss, and there is a great deal of doubt as to the value of massage in reducing. Your exercises and your calorie counting will turn the trick.

Q. "When shall I begin Marathon?"

A. Begin just as soon as you receive your booklet. Read all the instructions carefully and start immediately.

Q. "When should I weigh and measure?"

A. Weigh yourself before you begin Marathon. From then on weigh at the end of each week and measure at the end of each two weeks. It is discouraging to weigh every day because the scales do not show a loss each day. Weigh in the morning after going to the bathroom and before dressing.

Q. "Shall I exercise during my menstrual period?"

A. It is best to skip exercise for a couple of days or when the flow is heavy.

If you would like to join my 8-Week Self-Improvement Marathon, which can assure you a loss of 20 pounds in eight weeks, send 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for the Marathon booklet. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

For these cold, blustery days, woolen gloves are just the thing. From Switzerland are the extra-long, fine-knit gloves that come in white, pink or yellow. On the backs are touches of pearl or gold thread decoration, to give them a dressy look. Formerly priced at $2.50, they are now selling for just $1.25. The extra arm length of the gloves is especially wonderful if the cuffs of your coat are loose. There are two lengths, both longer than average.

Trains Rolling Again

PM's Formula Ends $31 Million Nine-Day Strike

OTTAWA (CP)—CPR trains are running again today after arm-twisting by Prime Minister St. Laurent to end the nine-day stoppage. Trans-continental passenger service was scheduled to resume early this evening.

The company and its firemen's union came to agreement late Friday — on temporary terms — to end the stoppage that began Jan. 2 and cost the national economy an estimated $31,500,000.

Immediately, the CPR and union started rolling trains and men into operation.

Freight and passenger embargos were lifted immediately. Spokesmen said priority would be given to transit of fuel and food supplies to centres dependent wholly on the CPR.

NORMAL BY MONDAY

The company said it expects normal operations to prevail by Monday, everywhere across the nation, weather permitting.

Mr. St. Laurent announced the settlement in the Commons at 5 p.m. Friday—nine days one hour from the time the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen (CLC) pulled out its 3,000 members. Another 67,000 CPR employees were made idle by the shutdown and other thousands in industries dependent on CPR for transportation had to be laid off.

Besides the estimated $10,000,000 cost in lost production, CPR revenue losses are estimated at $14,000,000 and company employee salary losses at some $7,500,000 for an estimated overall total of $31,500,000.

The crux of the stoppage was the CPR plan to pull firemen off freight and yard diesel engines.

The government now will set up a board of inquiry of three judges to recommend by Oct. 1 whether the number of firemen in diesel locomotive operations should be reduced.

The major issue in the negotiations on this point was whether the findings of the board should be binding. The CPR wanted them made binding, the union not.

The union won out on this issue, though the prime minister suggested in the Commons it would be difficult for either

Year's Worst Snow Blasts Mainland

VANCOUVER (CP)—Parts of the Lower Mainland today were digging out of the heaviest snowstorm to hit the area this winter.

In the Mission district, 45 miles east of Vancouver in the Fraser Valley, a foot of snow fell, making driving difficult and chains a necessity for the hills.

A strong wind brought blizzard conditions in the valley and four-foot drifts were piled up off the highways.

Several cars and a large trail-truck skidded off the Trans-Canada Highway between Langley and Abbotsford. A snowplow was needed to clear the highway north of Abbotsford.

Besides the estimated $10,000,000 cost in lost production, CPR revenue losses are estimated at $14,000,000 and company employee salary losses at some $7,500,000 for an estimated overall total of $31,500,000.

Election Demand Issued by Labor

(From UP and Reuters Dispatches)

LONDON—The Opposition Labor Party prepared today to demand immediate elections on grounds the Conservatives involved Queen Elizabeth in party politics by leaving it up to her to choose a new prime minister.

It was a technical point that rocked Britain because the constitution prevents the monarch from taking part in politics.

The Queen was put in the position. Labor men intimated of choosing between Chancellor of the Exchequer Harold Macmillan and House Majority Leader R. A. Butler when Sir Anthony Eden resigned as prime minister earlier this week.

Normally, the party in power nominates a single choice for the premiership, relieving the monarch of personal political responsibility.

(It has not been publicly disclosed whether Sir Anthony recommended Mr. Macmillan or Mr. Butler, or left the choice open.)

Appointment Unconstitutional?

The Laborites met behind closed doors Friday night to map strategy to force Macmillan into calling an immediate general election on grounds his appointment Thursday was unconstitutional, although the term of the present Conservative-ruled parliament does not expire until 1960.

They put off a decision whether to push the point until Labor Leader Hugh Gaitskell returns from a lecture tour in the United States.

Party leaders who leaked their plans to the press said Gaitskell agreed to cut the trip short next week and fly home.

They said Gaitskell reached this agreement in a Trans-Atlantic telephone conversation with James Griffiths, who is filling in for him during his absence.

The Socialist move was regarded here as a political sensation which threatened the Conservatives with a possible new crisis.

The dispute broke wide open before Macmillan had time to complete his Cabinet. He was expected to present the new government to the Queen for formal approval Sunday.

The Labor chiefs expressed fear that the Crown had been drawn into party politics "in a most undesirable way" when it was left to the sovereign to name either Macmillan or Butler.

Their views were expressed in a statement following a special meeting of the party's parliamentary committee—the leading Labor members in the House of Commons who sit as a "shadow cabinet."

"The committee is examining further the constitutional implications of the way in which this change was brought about," the statement said.

Was Sovereign 'On the Spot'?

It hinted at a major political row over putting the sovereign "on the spot." Labor leaders now contend the only way to solve the difficulty is for Macmillan to ask the Queen to dissolve Parliament at once and call a new election.

An election, they said, would automatically relieve the Crown of the embarrassment caused to it.

Speakers included left-winger Aneurin Bevan who complained the Conservative Party had imposed on the Queen a delicate task she should not have been given.

The speakers argued that the Conservative Party's rank and file had not selected a leader to succeed Eden. The Queen had to do it for them.

It follows, the Socialists said, that if any Conservatives ob-

U.S. Will Ask UN to Control Space Missiles

International Body Proposed For Job; Russ to Press Arms Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States is expected to outline a broad proposal for international control over space missiles Monday when the United Nations political committee takes up the arms question.

Informal sources indicated U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. will relay President Eisenhower's call for a "reliable agreement" on controlling military use of such projectiles.

Eisenhower set the stage for such a proposal in his state of the union message Thursday. In effect, the president called for an air-tight agreement within the framework of the UN on the use of inter-continental ballistic missiles.

3,773 Jobless In Victoria; More Jobs Due

Number of jobless in Victoria increased this week by 252, raising the total of unemployed to 3,773, the National Employment Service office here said today.

The increase was largely due to lay-offs from temporary Christmas jobs, NES said.

Figures show that mostly women were involved in the loss of employment. A total of 214 applied for insurance benefits, as compared with 33 men.

NES said the number of temporary job openings for men increased during the week.

NES said there were indications that a fair volume of work is ready to get under way as soon as the weather improves, but at the moment most jobs available are for replacements on regular crews.

RESIGNS—Mr. Leonard Hall wears a broad smile as he leaves the White House Friday after informing President Eisenhower that he is resigning as chairman of the Republican National Committee. Sportsman Dies Of Car Injuries

(Special to the Times)

PORT ALBERNI — Well-known Port Alberni sportsman W. H. "Dude" Kendrick, 35, died in West Coast General Hospital this morning of injuries received in a traffic accident early Friday.

His death was the first road fatality of the year in Port Alberni. Dates of an inquest and funeral have not been announced.

An employee of Dominion Construction Ltd., Kendrick is survived by his wife and two children at home, and a brother, Vern, also in Port Alberni.

Kendrick was in collision with a car driven by Donald Van Pelt, Parksville, Friday at 7 a.m. He was crossing the street to a friend's car at the time of the accident. Police said no charges will be laid.

He was well known in Island baseball and softball circles and played for many years on Port Alberni teams.

side not to accept the final report of the board of inquiry.

CPR President N. R. Crump said in a statement that the prime minister had stated that "after the investigation, which is now being arranged, finality will be achieved."

"I have accepted this assessment," he added.

Union leaders welcomed the settlement.

"We are very glad and quite satisfied," said W. E. Gamble of Montreal, Canadian chief of the striking union.

However, Mr. St. Laurent made it clear that the temporary settlement of the diesel issue will be subject to renegotiation after the three judges report.

He said the CPR and the union have agreed to accept a temporary agreement on the wage issue in line with the report of a federal conciliation board.

The board's report calls for a general increase in wages of 12 per cent, compared with the 25 per cent boost originally agreed by the union.

Informants said the government's idea on the wage issue is that the proposed new contract between the CPR and the union made the wage increase effective until May 31, 1958.

Mr. Gamble said he was "not too enthusiastic" about judges adjudicating the diesel issue—the union would have preferred a board including union and company appointees—but the plan to use judges was accepted to bring about a settlement.

He said he could not state that the union would abide by the board's finding.

"We will have to see what develops but it looks very encouraging," he added.

'EXPECTANT BRIDES' GET BETTER PROSPECT

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP)—No longer would altar-bound Rhode Island damsels be referred to as "expectant brides" in marriage licence forms if a bill filed in the State Legislature by representative L. Louise Stoddard becomes law.

Her bill would change the designation to "prospective" rather than "expectant."

The assemblywoman's move came after the Pawtucket Times published a whimsical appeal to the legislature to come to the aid of Rhode Island women's "good name."

ject to Macmillan, they can do so only by finding fault with the Queen.

With painstaking effort to avoid any criticism of the Queen herself, the Labor party chiefs announced they are calling a new meeting of policy planners to discuss the method of selection.

"We believe it is important that parties themselves should decide on their leaders," said deputy leader James Griffiths, "and that the Crown should not be put in the embarrassing questions of having to make a choice between rival claimants for the premiership from the same party."

Griffiths said the party's planners will consider the possibility of a motion of censure to be introduced when Parliament convenes Jan. 22.

While Labor leaders discussed strategy Macmillan and Churchill dined alone at Churchill's Hyde Park home. As Macmillan was leaving, he said to his host:

"I have come to the fountain of all wisdom. Will you wish me well?"

Churchill pulled a long black cigar from his left hand and pumped Macmillan's hand with his right.

"Indeed, I do, I do," said the 82-year old elder statesman.

Labor Party sources said an editorial in the powerful Times of London first raised the question discussed Friday night. Situations which faced the Queen yesterday are not likely to occur often," the Times said. "If they did, the modern difficulties of the position and the procedure would need to be examined more closely."

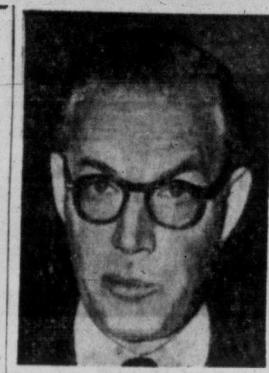

"Time and events will show how wisely she judged."

Sets Winter Recruit Drive

Officers of HMCS Malahat, RCN reserve establishment, Victoria, B.C., met Thursday night to lay plans for a winter recruiting drive.

The Malahat drive is part of a coast-to-coast program to build up reserve strength. All dry land "ships" in various cities of Canada will spend the next eight weeks recruiting young men and women into the Royal Canadian Navy (Reserve).

Objective is to increase strength by more than 1,000 men and Wrens. At present the RCN (R) has about 6,000 officers and men, including 700 Wrens.

Each naval division, including Malahat, will conduct its own recruiting campaign on an individual basis.

Recruits who join the reserve normally spend one night a week training at their local division, and two weeks during the summer at the Great Lakes Training Command, Hamilton.

In addition, reservists here get frequent weekend cruises throughout the year.

Finance Minister Harris knew nothing about it when the mayor went to see him.

"It was given to Vancouver while he was in Paris."

"But I insisted a precedent had been set," the mayor added, pointing out he had requested similar consideration for Victoria.

He said he was still not certain what the federal action will be.

"But I have a sneaking suspicion the 10 per cent sales tax will be taken off all new bridges in Canada."

ANIMALS AROUND US

Water Fleas Thrive Without Men-Types

By DR. G. CLIFFORD CARL

No body of water is without life, unless it is chemically treated. Each lake, stream, reservoir, and temporary pond on land supports living things as do all parts of the sea. Even hot springs and salt lakes have their peculiar fauna and flora.

A newly-created pond soon becomes populated with plants and animals through the agency of seeds, spores, eggs and other resting stages of living things carried by winds, by birds or by other means.

Only springs gushing forth from the earth may be completely devoid of some form of life, but before the water has travelled many yards it will pick up its first inhabitants from the earth or from the air. Thus all living space eventually becomes filled.

WATER FLEA

One of the most common aquatic creatures is the water flea, a minute dancing speck just visible to the naked eye, providing the light is favorable.

It is represented by various species found in all lakes and ponds in almost every part of the world. It swims at times in the ponds in Beacon Hill Park much to the delight of amateur aquarists who net out millions of the living specks to fatten up young fish. In the days before chlorination it was not uncommon to find a water flea or two or perhaps its cousin a copepod in one's water glass on the dinner table. Whether one drank it or not depended upon one's degree of observation or tolerance to wildlife being on the menu.

PADDLE-FEELERS

First cousin to the water flea is another group of small crustaceans called copepods; the two kinds are nearly always found together in fresh water but not in salt water which is uninhabited by water fleas. Copepods have a different body form but are equipped with paddle-like feelers for swimming as are the water fleas consequently the two groups are often confused. Copepods also differ in that each has one eye located in the middle of the forehead like the giant Cyclops of Greek mythology.

In fact our most common copepods found in nearly all fresh waters of the world are called Cyclops after this legendary monster.

Water fleas and copepods are a valuable source of food for small fish and other similar meat-eating animals. In fresh waters they share the honors but in the sea it is the copepods that are unbelievably abundant forming a most essential supply of protein and fat for all carnivorous marine animals either directly or indirectly. They are the principal agents that convert plant life in the form of minute diatoms and other algae into animal form and are therefore

Halt Price Rise, Ike Warns Business

By WALTER BREED JR.

NEW YORK (AP) — Businessmen found themselves under increasing pressure last week to halt rising prices.

President Eisenhower set the tone.

Inflation, he said in his state of the union message, is the "principal threat" to our economy. He added:

"Businessmen . . . should avoid unnecessary price increases, especially at a time like the present when demand in so many areas presses hard on short supplies . . . increases in wages must be reasonably related to improvements in productivity."

Signs of consumer resistance to increases were reported by gas dealers in Texas. Auto dealers said some customers were balky at higher price tags on new cars.

The steel industry continued to operate at near-record levels last week. Mills said demand for sheet steel from the auto makers was below expectations but no letup was foreseen in demand for structural steel and oil drilling equipment.

BIONDA'S BOXLA FUTURE UP TO HIM, SAYS LYNN

Whether or not Jack Bionda plays lacrosse for the Victoria Shamrocks this summer will be up to Bionda himself, according to Lynn Patrick, general manager of the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

Patrick, who took Bionda up to the Bruins this year, said Friday night that he would not prevent Bionda from playing lacrosse in the off-season but that he would not encourage his rookie star.

Patrick said, "I won't order Jack not to play lacrosse. But I will point out the pitfalls and the disadvantages he faces if he is injured badly enough in lacrosse to harm his hockey career. If he still wants to play then, I will not stop him."

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

BY

Denny Boyd

You'd have to walk many a back-court before you'd see two basketball types of such contrasting cut as Norm Baker and Art Chapman.

Just their appearance, for instance: Norm's hair is blonder than the cork in a bleach bottle. Art's hair is . . . well, there's quite a contrast.

Art is an affable, even-tempered type whose great court skill was his scheming mind.

Norm is a fiery, go-to-blazes competitor whose demoniac smile can infuriate opponents.

Art and Norm came up through Victoria's greatest basketball days, those rousing days of the Domino teams that moved across Canada like a scythe, leaving a shambles of broken teams behind them.

After the days of the Dominos, Art and Norm rode the rods as pros together in a short but madcap and memorable stint with Vancouver Hornets in the ill-fated professional league that flamed briefly and then was blown out by the hot breaths of creditors.

It was yeoman fare, that pro basketball. You had to be good, you had to be smart, you had to be tough, you had to have a sense of humor.

How good did you have to be?

Well, there was a night when the Hornets were playing Bellingham against Gail Bishop's Bells. Norm had played a meager first half, and as a consequence, the Hornets trailed most of the way. With a little more than a minute left, the Hornets were five points down and Norm was still playing in a stony silence.

Three Long Ones—Six Points

But Baker took a pass near the side, ran a couple of steps over centre and let fly with one of those suicide one-handers of his. It whistled through the hoop and the Bells took the ball to protect what was suddenly only a three-point lead.

The Bells threw a pass under the Hornet basket and Baker snatched it out of the air. Again he dribbled over centre and uncorked his one hander. Whish, and it was a one-point lead.

The quaking Bells now had only one thought with 20 seconds left. Keep the ball away from that blank-blank Baker.

But Norm cornered a desperately retreating Bellingham player near the side-lines, grabbed the ball out of his hands and literally threw it at the Bellingham basket. The ball dropped through the cords as the whistle sounded and the Hornets had a one-point victory.

How smart did you have to be?

One time the Hornets were playing in Portland and they were one point down in the last minute of play.

Chapman had the ball near the side-lines and was being soundly checked by a fellow named John Mondich. Art didn't have a chance to shoot but he came up under Mondich as if he was going to make the longest lay-up in the history of the game. Art piled into Mondich's arms, the referee obligingly called a foul and Art dunked both shots for a one-point victory.

How tough did you have to be?

One night a guy named Bob Voelker jammed an elbow in Norm's face and Norm dropped his opponent with a large handful of fist.

A fan called Norm nasty things so Norm repeated the treatment on the cash customer. That one cost Baker a $100 fine.

One Good Slap Deserved Another

Another time, a referee called a foul on Baker and, to emphasize his point, slapped Norm on the back. The slap knocked Baker to his knees so he got up and slapped the referee down. That cost him another $100.

As for the sense of humor, Baker had to have one that time the club was driving back from a road game. Norm had purchased a gleaming new car that was the pride of his life. Richie Nicol was sitting in the back seat, sipping a beer and cracking peanuts from a 50-cent bag.

Norm didn't mind so much Richie littering the back seat ankle deep in peanut shells but when Nicol tossed his empty through the window without first opening the window, Norm found it a trifling hard to smile.

Well, all that is in the past now. Norm is a policeman and Art is a successful salesman in Vancouver.

But they'll both be back in the basketball scene tonight at Central Junior High School gym. Norm as a playing coach and Art as a bench coach.

And don't think they won't relive a lot of memories tonight. The years can't erase those.

The leader after the first round was Texan Billy Maxwell, who took over from his twin brother, Bobby, with a six-under-par 66.

The other pros scoring 68 were Bobby Maxwell, veteran Byron Nelson, Bob Rosburg of Palo Alto, Calif., and Bill Nary of Tucson, Ariz.

Defending champion Cary Middlecoff, the U.S. Open titlist, who won this event the last two years, was among the victims of Cypress Point. He wound up with a 76.

Veteran Ellsworth Vines, who finished in a seven-way tie at 69, scored a hole-in-one at the 158-yard seventh.

Why Did Veterans Lose? Well, You Figure It Out

Age Made Difference

By IAN SMITH (Who Saw the Game)

Vic High Totems proved Friday night that age and experience are no match for youthful enthusiasm as they downed Victoria High's "All-Time Greats," 43-41.

Oldtimers, all former Vic High students who were members of Canadian Championship teams, said goodbye for good to the courts as they dropped their third game after seven consecutive wins in the annual classic.

The oldsters, who had distinguished any practice sessions in stating that they needed to save their energy for the game, used the first half principally to sharpen their shooting eyes.

But while the veterans were acclimating themselves, the enthusiastic Totems were running every which-way, putting baskets, stealing rebounds and romping to a 18-5 lead in the first quarter.

The oldtimers put on their checking clothes in the second quarter and stopped the Totems cold for the loss of only six points. However, the best the veterans could do for their own offence was a nine-point total and they trailed, 24-14, as they puffed gratefully into the dressing room for their half-time rest.

VEETS SNAP BACK

It was a revitalized Oldtimers team that came back on the floor for the second half.

With George Andrews and Doug Peden leading the way, the veterans at one time pulled to within one point of their young opponents but that two points represented a wider gap than the age span between the players. And neither could be bridged.

With five minutes left in the game, it was 37-37 for the Totems. Cruel as it may seem, the Totems went into a freeze with the ball and the vets were unable to get the ball long enough to wrest away the lead that Totems had held from the opening whistle.

Top scorer for both teams was Totems' tall forward, John Devlin, who took rebounds off both backboards with amazing regularity in piling up 16 points.

Art Chapman's Cloverdale squad will be led by high-scoring John McLeod, a member of Canada's Olympic hoop team at Melbourne.

Game time at Central Junior High School gym is 8:15.

That Floor Did It

By DOUG PEDEN (Who Played in It)

Whoever designed that new Victoria High School gymnasium was the best player the Vic High Totems had working for them Friday night.

On the shiny half-acre of hardwood we, the fellows they call the All-Time Vic High Basketball Greats, at times could hardly see the Totems, let alone keep up with their busy feet as they galloped gleefully from corner to corner.

Things were a lot more comfortable on the old floor, a cosy quarter-acre job, on which we managed to span the young upstarts seven times before they forgot respect for their elders and turned the kids and lost by only two points.

They tell us the floor is only a few feet longer than the old one. But don't you believe it. One more year couldn't have made all that difference or could it?

SPY FAILED

We even had a spy in the Totem ranks. Porky Andrews coaches the Vic High hoop hooligans and his report was as helpful as ever. "We might have a chance," he observed, "but watch for their fast break." We watched the fast break all night but we didn't have a chance to keep up with it.

The papers also said we might have too many tricks for the youngsters. The truth was, they gave us a couple of lessons in tactics, especially in the first half when they raced to a 24-14 lead.

We started without rhyme or reason, just happy to get hold of the ball and itching to fire shots at the basket. The result was we grabbed few rebounds and did as much to run ourselves into the floor as did the Totems.

But we learned something. If we were coming back next year things might be different.

However, we won't be and those gold cuff links bearing the Vic High crest, which the school presented to each of us, more than made Friday's effort worth while.

Right-winger Brown's 99th goal credited Vancouver captain Phil Maloney with the first of three assists he chalked up in the game.

New Westminster goalie Ben Bentley blocked Maloney's screen shot but dropped the puck and sprawled to the ice. Brown scooped it from between Bentley's outstretched legs and lobbed it into the net.

Brown had time enough for two shots to achieve his 100th goal. He missed the goal with his first shot, recovered the rebound and found the range on his second chance.

The victory, which marked goalie Ray Mikulan's third shutout this season, left New Westminster in third place, two games behind Vancouver.

QORs Cheer Return to Victoria; Passes Issued for Night in Town

By AB KENT

"Oh, boy, we're home."

Similar sentiments were expressed almost to a man as 212 members of Second Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, rejoined their unit at Camp Gordon Head this morning.

Back from temporary duty with First Battalion, QORs, in Calgary, the force waited a month in Halifax expecting Middle East duty as United Nations police troops and got sub-zero weather in Calgary instead of sunburn in Suez.

Men arrived here on the 7 a.m. ferry from Vancouver after a CNR rail trip via Edmonton.

They had been given the opportunity of staying with the First Battalion, but only about 30 riflemen and NCOs preferred Calgary to Victoria. Some have their homes on the Prairies and wanted to be stationed nearby.

About 240 men, NCOs and one officer, Capt. Dan Woodbury, were in the draft which left here last Armistice Day.

After dumping rifles and kit at Camp Gordon Head, the single men in barracks drew bedding from quartermaster stores and then most headed for a big night in town.

They were disappointed at not getting to see the sights of the mysterious Middle East, but reassignment to their old unit in Victoria was compensation enough.

A big worry for some is having to start all over again with such items as car financing, since most owners let cars go at a sacrifice as soon as they learned they could volunteer for special force duty.

Men were still enthused about the treatment they received at the hands of hospitable Haligonians, who laid on free shows and entertainments, and guided tours.

Resumption of routine training is scheduled for next week, which will be the first crack at it for the younger men since completion of basic training last fall.

One 18-year-old rifleman was asked if he felt himself qualified to serve overseas with the amount of initial training he had received.

He felt he was, but personally would have liked to be more experienced before being assigned to overseas duty.

Minimum age of 19 years for overseas duty was reduced to 18 to enable the First Battalion to fulfill its establishment, and this action was questioned in Ottawa by Esquimalt-Saanich Member of Parliament, Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes.

All checked in at Gordon Head, QORs head for weekend "on the town."

Department of I - should - ought - to - have - quit - when - I - was - ahead.

From Beverly Baxter's London Letter in the current issue of Maclean's Magazine:

"... let me end this London Letter by returning for a moment to the prime minister. Last April I wrote in Maclean's that it was difficult to imagine Eden still in power in 1957. Unfortunately, Maclean's is a persistent globe trotter and has a surprisingly large number of readers in Britain, and I was confronted on many occasions with that unfortunate prophecy.

"Nothing dined, as the Irishman said, I now prophesy that Eden will lead his government with renewed strength and courage and wisdom.

"He will gain in confidence and reputation as the man who changed the United Nations from a talking shop into a world force, and in the process saved the Middle East from Communism and the evil overlordship of Russia.

"If this proves true—and I believe it will—then Eden will have won his place in history."

And Beverly Baxter's rightful place with all the other international forecasters.

But leave us move on to a happier subject.

Local constituents are aware of the Old Jokes Home which Between Times maintains, and will appreciate why a reservation has already been made for this comparatively new joke, which will, with the passing of time, become eligible for the Old Jokes Home.

A gentleman who had looked rather too earnestly upon the giddy juice was driving his car the wrong way up a one-way street.

An efficient policeman stepped off the curb, stopped the car, and in the classic phrase intoned "Where do you think YOU'RE going?"

Replied the hop-happy motorist:

"I dunno, offisher. But I mush be late. Ever'body else ish comin' back."

Which reminds me of Our Very Own Definition of stiff competition.

TODAY'S BEEFS

Thursday at 5:15 p.m. I was stopped on Fort Street waiting in the curbside lane of traffic for the light to change on Blanshard. A middle-aged woman paused on the curb at my right, looked up at the traffic signal on Blanshard which had just changed to amber, and then doggedly began walking against the red light immediately in front of my car and the car on my left as we began to proceed across Blanshard with the green light. Fortunately for her we hesitated.

At 5:15 p.m. Friday, at the corner of Lansdowne Road and Richmond, which is a four-way stop corner, a light tan Chevrolet went through the stop signal on the southwest side of Lansdowne Road, going straight ahead on Lansdowne, despite the fact that, after coming to a stop our car had moved into the intersection coming north on Richmond. If our brakes had not been good a bad accident would have occurred.

Cressman told Magistrate H. C. Hall he wished to obtain counsel. Bail was set at $500.

Second Fire In Vacant House Sparks Probe

Youths Questioned; Serious Damage

Second fire in 48 hours at an unoccupied house at 2819 Quesnel was under investigation today by city fire department and police officials.

Firemen were called to the house at 1:55 a.m. today and were at the scene an hour and a half extinguishing the flames, which caused considerable damage to the roof and attic.

TWO QUESTIONED

Two youths, one 17 and the other 21, were brought to the police station at 2:30 a.m. and questioned by Fire Chief Frank Briers and detectives. They were later released.

The youths were picked up at Manchester and Burnside, near the fire, after Chief Briers called police.

The first fire broke out at 2 a.m. Thursday, and did extensive damage to one room.

Fire department officials said after that blaze that they were not sure of the cause.

Three trucks attended to day's fire and the last one didn't leave until 3:16 a.m.

Investigations into the fire were continuing today and it was believed the provincial fire marshal's office would be called in.

Man Slightly Hurt In 40-MPH Tumble From Car

Minor cuts and bruises were all that Theodore Campbell, Ell Lake Auto Court, received early today when he fell from a car travelling 40 miles an hour on the Pat Bay Highway.

Saanich police said Campbell slipped out while the car, driven by Earl Oberg of 693 Brookleigh, was travelling near Haliburton, at about 1 a.m.

Campbell was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital where he was found to have a cut on the side of his head and bruises on his arm and right leg.

He was scheduled to return to hospital today for a further checkup.

$2,000 Bail For Man Charged In Wire Theft

Richard Brooks, 136 Conrad, was charged in city police court today with theft over $50 in connection with a break-in at Capital Iron Works a week ago.

Five rolls of copper wire valued at more than $400 were stolen.

Brooks asked for a remand without plea in order to obtain legal counsel.

Magistrate H. C. Hall fixed bail at $2,000 and set trial for Brooks' next court appearance.

Police said the main gates of the Capital Iron yard at 1832 Store were removed from the hinges last Saturday night and the rear shed doors opened to allow a truck to back up to the wire. The five rolls weighed nearly 1,700 pounds.

Tenders will be called Feb. 6 for a $150,000 addition to Mount View High School that will include classrooms, home economics rooms, administrative quarters, laboratories and alterations to the heating system.

On the other hand, the association reported that several homes have offered to take in boys and girls. At the moment, it did not anticipate any difficulty in placing any of the women as there was a shortage of domestic help in Victoria.

Up-Island Hit By Big Snowfall

OLD FROSTY PUSHING WARM WEATHER AWAY

Mild, Pacific air is slowly but surely losing a battle with cold air from the northern interior of the province for dominance of the southern Vancouver Island weather picture.

Victoria's weatherman Bill Mackie said today temperatures are slowly dropping.

"The low-pressure area off the coast is weakening," he said. "This gives the cold air, pushed by high pressures, a good opportunity to move in."

There is little danger of snow, however.

Cloudy skies, clearing partially, are forecast. Low tonight will be between 28 and 30, high Sunday in the mid or high thirties. Temperature at noon today was 35.

Art Gallery Wing Drawings Ordered

Working drawings for a proposed fireproof wing at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria are being prepared by architects Clack, Clayton, Pickstone.

Plans call for two galleries in the new wing, one measuring 30 by 60 feet, and the other 30 by 30 feet. It also will have a service basement for crating and uncrating pictures, storage, and general workshop activities required in the operation of the gallery.

The plans also will help us in drawing up a highly flexible lighting system to suit all types of exhibits," said Colin Clack, architect.

Mr. Clack said the preparation of the drawings is "not an indication that we have found the funds we need" but the natural result of the firm's having won a competition sponsored by Victoria Rotary Club for a suitable design.

"The snow is thawing fast today," said Nanaimo police said.

Forecast now calls only for occasional flurries today and Sunday.

The heavy wet snow at Duncan has caused the worst break-down in telegraph service in the last five or six years.

The worst breaks have been between Duncan and Nanaimo, but the lines to Victoria have also been badly affected. At one time there were seven breaks between here and Nanaimo.

Friday there was no service north or south from Duncan for three or four hours and all commercial teletype services were out.

International Body Proposed For Job; Russ to Press Arms Plan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States is expected to outline a broad proposal for international control over space missiles Monday when the United Nations political committee takes up the arms question.

Informed sources indicated U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. will relay President Eisenhower's call for a "reliable agreement" on controlling military use of such projectiles.

Eisenhower set the stage for such a proposal in his state of the union message Thursday. In effect, the president called for an air-tight agreement within the framework of the UN on the use of inter-continental ballistic missiles.

NES said the number of temporary job openings for men increased during the week.

NES said there were indications that a fair volume of work is ready to get under way as soon as the weather improves, but at the moment most jobs available are for replacements on regular crews.

'EXPECTANT BRIDES' GET BETTER PROSPECT

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — No longer would altar-bound Rhode Island damsels be referred to as "expectant brides" in marriage licence forms if a bill filed in the State Legislature by representative L. Louise Stoddard becomes law.

Her bill would change the designation to "prospective" rather than "expectant."

The assemblywoman's move came after the Pawtucket Times published a whimsical appeal to the legislature to come to the aid of Rhode Island women's "good name."

QUEEN

ject to Macmillan, they can do so only by finding fault with the Queen.

With painstaking effort to avoid any criticism of the Queen herself, the Labor party chiefs announced they are calling a new meeting of policy planners to discuss the method of selection.

"We believe it is important that parties themselves should decide on their leaders," said deputy leader James Griffiths, "and that the Crown should not be put in the embarrassing position of having to make a choice between rival claimants for the premiership from the same party."

Griffiths said the party's planners will consider the possibility of a motion of censure to be introduced when Parliament convenes Jan. 22.

While Labor leaders discussed strategy Macmillan and Churchill dined alone at Churchill's Hyde Park home. As Macmillan was leaving, he said to his host:

"I have come to the fountain of all wisdom. Will you wish me well?"

Churchill pulled a long black cigar from his left hand and puffed Macmillan's hand with its right.

"Indeed, I do, I do," said the 82-year-old elder statesman.

Labor Party sources said an editorial in the powerful Times of London first raised the question discussed Friday night. "Situations which faced the Queen yesterday are not likely to occur often," the Times said. "If they did, the modern difficulties of the position and the procedure would need to be examined more closely."

"Time and events will show how wisely she judged."
